ART WORKS FOR OUR LOCAL ECONOMY.

Innovation

The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) puts it simply: "The arts and culture industry is a sector of the economy just like any other with workers who pay taxes, mortgages, rent and contribute in other ways to the economy." Currently, there are 1,116 arts-related businesses in central Kentucky employing nearly 5,700 people - in Fayette County alone, 500 arts jobs produce more than $9.5 million in household income. The arts share consumers with restaurants, retailers and tourism creating a ripple effect.

ART WORKS FOR OUR CHILDREN.

Educate

According to Americans for the Arts, young people who participate in 3 or more hours on 3 days each week for a full year are:

- 4 times more likely to be recognized for academic achievement
- 3 times more likely to be elected to class office within their schools
- 4 times more likely to participate in math and science fairs
- 3 times more likely to win an award for school attendance
- 4 times more likely to win an award for writing an essay or a poem

LexArts groups serving children average 30% in scholarships; offer reduced ticket prices for schools; provide programming in schools and at risk youth facilities; reach more than 200,000 children in central Kentucky annually.

ARTS WORKS FOR OUR NEIGHBORHOODS.

Community

Initiatives such as LexArts' Lexington Mural Project have impacted how we use public space to reflect cultural heritage. Swingin' to the Music, a mural created by artist Michael Burrell on North Limestone (pictured below), not only beautified the neighborhood and celebrated its vivid musical history, but inspired the construction of a stage in nearby Duncan Park for public performances. This summer the park became home to a live jazz series, providing a free and accessible artistic outlet.

The United States Conference of Mayors states, "The arts reflect the diversity of our experiences as individuals and our communities as a whole. They remind us of our past and help us imagine the future."
